

8. Conclusion

Tetramethylpyrazine possesses the significant anti-diabetic activity and prominent diabetic nephropathy alleviating potential as observed in the preclinical studies in rats. Therefore, we may conclude that tetramethylpyrazine may be used as a good therapeutic alternative for the treatment of type-2 diabetes and its nephropathic complication after extensive clinical investigations.

